From serving as a trusted voice on Capitol Hill, to traveling across the country, to putting forward new and innovative policy ideas – the Committee has continued serving as a go to source for information about the troubled state of America’s finances and a leading advocate for fiscal responsibility in Washington.

ON THE HILL

“Well, you know, what’s funny is my friends at the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, they are very, very strong on budgeting.”

—Rep. Chip Roy (R-TX)

“The Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget is, I have to say, admirably independent, and at times, they are an equal opportunity afflicter of both sides of the political divide depending on the piece of legislation that’s coming down the pike.”

—House Budget Committee Ranking Member Brendan Boyle (D-PA)
